Controlling the Heating

The heating can be controlled in one of 3 ways:

- 1- To switch the heating on or off please use the button located beside heater on the wall as shown with the arrow. Please note when the light is on and it looks like this, the radiator is turned on.

- 2 - To control the temperature of the radiator, look for the gauge which looks like this:

Move the red dot on the knob to the 12 o'clock position to get maximum heat.

To reduce the heat move the knob to the 9 o'clock position.

The 3rd way to control the radiator is using the control on the front of the radiator. We would ask that you do not change these settings and to control your room temperature use the guidance already explained in this section.

The dial shown at point A is a timer to control when the heating comes on and off

The controls shown at point B should always be in this position if you are using the previous descriptions to control the heating.

The dial shown at point C should stay in this position as it controls the heat flow into the radiator

Shower & Bathroom Fan

The bathroom fan will be activated automatically when you enter the bathroom and switch on the light.

Before you enter the shower you must ensure it is turned on using the cable beside the light switch.

The image below shows the shower turned off
